Abstract:

This sharing aims to address the contemporary challenges and opportunities in teaching IB Chinese, with a special focus on the importance of 'innovation' and 'diversity'. The session will explore how cultural diversity can challenge stereotypes and enhance the educational experience, highlighting the critical role of diverse teaching materials that evolve alongside current cultural and societal contexts. Innovative teaching methodologies, including the use of AI technology, will be discussed to showcase how they can be integrated into Chinese language teaching to improve writing skills and student outcomes. The presentation will include case studies that exemplify these approaches in action. The lecture will conclude with a Q&A session, providing attendees an opportunity to engage directly with the topics discussed.

Guest Speaker:

Mr Martin Mak currently serves as the Head of Chinese at ESF South Island School in Hong Kong, where he has significantly contributed to the development of the Chinese language curriculum. He holds a Master of Philosophy from the University of Cambridge and a Master of Education (Teaching Chinese as a Second Language) from The University of Hong Kong. He is also an examiner for public examinations and a trainer for teachers. As a published author, he has written several textbooks, enhancing the learning experiences for students studying Chinese both as a first language and as a second language. Martin's approach to education not only emphasises academic excellence but also incorporates wellness and personal development. With over a decade of experience in various educational roles, Martin has established himself as a leader in bilingual education and cross-curricular integration.
