Abstract:

Within the International Baccalaureate (IB) education framework, the principle of lifelong learning plays a pivotal role, extending its relevance to every participant within the "learning community". As teachers, how can we internalize the values of the IB to motivate personal and professional growth? How can we collectively grow with the learning community through continuous learning and reflection? How can we help parents better understand the values of the IB? This session aims to inspire teachers to consider continuous professional growth and development within the IB learning community by sharing stories and practices from various aspects of a new IB school.
