Abstract:

As generative artificial intelligence (Gen AI) rapidly transforms education, its impact on Chinese language teaching has become an undeniable trend. However, many educators face challenges in effectively integrating Gen AI into their teaching practices. This forum is dedicated to the practical application of Gen AI in teaching Chinese at both primary and secondary levels, highlighting the seamless integration of technology and language instruction. The forum will cover the following content:

- Introducing frameworks related to Gen AI
- Exploring Gen AI applications that align with the teaching philosophy of Chinese language education
- Sharing commonly used Gen AI tools and real classroom experiences in Chinese language teaching
- Demonstrating prompt-writing techniques to enhance the effective use of Gen AI

Join us on this transformative journey and discover how to enhance your teaching with the power of Gen AI!

Guest Speaker:

Ms. Grace Koh (高麗雲) is currently the Lead Teacher of Chinese Language at Xinmin Secondary School in Singapore. She previously served as the Head of Department for Special Projects and as a School Staff Developer in secondary schools. Additionally, she had the opportunity to serve as a Teaching Fellow at the National Institute of Education, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore, from 2023 to 2025. Ms. Koh has been working closely with school leaders on teacher training related to assessment design and ICT applications in teaching. She has also explored various applications of Gen AI in Chinese language education and has collaborated with many frontline teachers to implement Gen AI in their classrooms. Moreover, she was involved in school leadership training, offering courses to help school leaders effectively integrate Gen AI into the school context. Her extensive experience with Gen AI applications in the Chinese language classroom has inspired many teachers to engage in this innovative approach.
